plain soldier's cloak, the remains of Sersius were borne to the Choudort Cloisfer, where officials and members of the Grand Duke's suite had assembled.

The assassin was thrown to the ground and stunned by the force of the explosion, but he quickly arose and ran toward the gate, attempting to escape, His hack and the blood streaming from his face where he had been wounded by fragments of the bomb, attracted the attention of a sergeant of police, who seized him before he could draw his revolver. The man did not deny his crime, but on the contrary gloried in its success. He expressed his satisfaction that he had been able to kill the Grand Duke without involving the latter's innocent wife. He arosed membership of the socialist revolutionary organization, but refused to give his name and at the fail his papers were found to be forged.

Grand Duke Sergius, who generally was accompanied by his wife when out driving, was on this occasion soins to his private Russian bath in his old official residence in Tverskala Street. The vehicle in which he rode was a plain, shabby closed carriage, such as would not be likely to attract attention. It was followed by defectives in a couple of cabs. The only actual witnesses of the assassination were a couple of policemen on beat in the velonity.

A few prople who had been attracted by the sound of the explosion made their way inside the Kremlin before the police were able to close the gates, but they were speedily rejected.

While enormous crowds were gathering outside the gate the body of Grand Duke Sergius was taken by way of a private corridor from the palace to the Choudoff monastery. Prayers for the murdered Grand Duke were held later in the evening, the Grand Duke Sergius will be interred in the Cathedral of the Fort-beth, civil and military officials being present.

The body of Grand Duke Sergius will be interred in the Cathedral of the Fort-ress of St. Peter and St. Paul.

The extra newspapers last night an-nounced the death of Grand Duke Ser-gius by the explosion of a bomb, out gave no details.

Intensely Unpopular.

Intensely Unpopular.

Grand Duke Sergius, who was a brotherin-law as well as uncle of the Emperor, and who had exercised impress influence at court, was regarded at the most reactionary of the grand dukes. As GovernorGeneral of Moscow, he was intensely unpopular. His advent as Governor-General or Moscow, was followed by expulsion of the Jews from the central provinces and throughout his administration his rigorous and harsh measures aroused the greatest hostility, especially among the students. Two years ag, after the student rlots, in which many were killed or wounded, several hundred expulsions to Siberia followed, under the orders of Grand Duke Sergius and General Trepeff. Grand Duke Sergius and General Trepoff or Sheria Johnwed, under the orders of Grand Duke Sergius and General Trepoff, now Governor-General of St. Petersburg, out who was then chief of police of Moscow. As there were many threats made against his life, the Grand Duke was obliged to flee to his sunfiner residence, tweaty miles from the city.

During the recent strike disturbance the Grand Duke left, the Diskouthouy Palace, on the outskirts of the city, where he had been living, and took refuge inside the ramparts of the Kremlin, where he had since lived in what was known as the Little Palace, opposite the famous statue of Alexander II. The trip to the Kremlin on that occasion was made at night between solid lines of troops.

spite of the ruthless fushion in which he exercised his authority as Governor-General. He was childless, but had adopted two children of his brother, Paul, who was banksed on account of a Morganatic alliance. Sergius, as a soldler, was not brilliant. He suffered a disastrous defeat at the hands of Geheral Kuropatkin during the famous Koursk manoeuvres.

Much of the responsibility for the catastrophe at the coronation of Emperor Nicholas, in Moscow, when several thousand people were crushed to death at the time of the distribution of the imperial gifts, was laid at Grand Duke Sergius's door, it was held that he had not taken sufficient precautions, and the Liberals, after the affair here of January 22d, plated the major portion of the blame on the scheduler. after the affair here of January 22d, slaced the major portion of the blame on

The sentence of death on Grand Duke Serglus was contained in a proclamation issued by the social revolutionists of Moscow after the demonstration on December 11th of hist year at St. Petersburg was put down. It read:

ial Palace of the Kremlin. It was the list time he spoke for publication, and, as it hapened, it was the last.

He was a man of handsome, regular features, of medium height, and strongly built, and gave me the impression of a man overfond of the indulgences belonging to his rank, and who would rather depute the execution of repressive measures to his subordinates than undertase the cruel task himself.

His appointment as governor-general of Moscow in 1801 was signalized by the enforcement of the Ignatleff laws against the Jews of Moscow. This act of oppression was executed in a truly barbarous spirit by Generals Yostanda and Yod-koffsky, but the odium of perscution attached to Sergius. Possibly his assassination may be fraced to some of the years ago.

sination may be traced to some of the victims of his birlial expulsion fourteen years ago.

The wife of the Grand Duke Sergius, who is a sister to the Empress is very popular in Moscow! When I was in Moscow it was believed that the public love for the Grand Duchess would shield the husband against any act or violence. The Grand Duchess would shield the husband against any act or violence. The Grand Duches would shield the husband against any act or violence. The Grand Duches would shield the husband against any act or violence. The Grand Duches would not good to any cause. It will only tend to produce further repression. Reform can come only through the education of the people. Assassination retards all advance towards liberty and enlighterment. The murder of the Czar Alexander deprived the Russian people of the fruits of the reforms which Alexander was considering on the day of his assassination. The killing of General Bobrikoff in Finland postponed the reconsideration of the disastrous decree of 1309 suspending the Yinnish constitution. This opinion was expressed to inc when I was in Helsing-from recently. The methods of barbarism are misapplied in the cause of freedom, and are not those best calculated to promote any movement seeking the rule of justice and right and reason.

The salvation of the Russian empire would, be secured immediately if the Czar's advisers would or could urge him to extend the old constitution to Finland, with its four chambers of nobles, clerky and burghers, in a legislative det, or the zemsky sobor to the whole of Russia.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. I. The advocatos of the bill making an appeopriation for the Jamestown Exposition, profess absolute confidence to-day that it will be passed. The sentiment in favor of the bill is declared to be much stronger this session than it was last year, owing to the President's having endorsed the project in his message, and to his hiaving made it a point to appeal to leading members of Congress on the Alepvillean side to support this lineasure. Republicans who would have voted against it will vote for it. Representative Tawney, who is chairman of the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions, which reported the bill favorably; is an able fighter, and he will be a tower of strength on the Republican side when the struggle for the bill is on in the House. At present the friends of the measure are interested in getting a rule reported by the Committee on Rules, fixing a day for the consideration of the bill. Speaker Cannon is understood to be in an exceedingly friendly attitude towards it.
